

Wanda Marie Fannin Henderson

Wanda Fannin Henderson has lived in Kerr County for more than 50 years, coming here first as a 16-year-old to work on a dude ranch. This was when she met a good-looking cowboy and her future was set. The following summer she married Temple Henderson, had four children over the years as well as working at a number of jobs outside the home. She worked at radio station KERV, and then opened the tax office for the Ingram Independent School District, working there for five years. Then she became a banker and remembers that in the flood of '78, she had to do some money "laundering" for a local businessman whose till got flooded. In the meantime, she was active in her children's activities, especially 4-H and FFA, as well as civic organizations, including the Kerr County Historical Commission for which she served as president. She was also involved in the American Women's Business Association and has been a Sunday School teacher for more than 50 years, leading numerous Bible study groups. Today, Wanda continues to be involved in all facets of community life in Kerr County.
