

NICHOLS CEMETERY

Born about 1805, Rowland Nichols settled in Kerr County where he served as county commissioner. Upon his death at the hands of Indians, Nichols was buried, as he wished, under a live oak tree on his farm on April 11, 1859. This site became a community burial ground and the burial place of many area pioneers, including J. C. W. Ingram (1829-1902), for whom the town of Ingram was named. Additional property was later purchased from Lafayette Nichols to enlarge the cemetery. For over a century Nichols Cemetery has served the residents of this part of Kerr County. (1982)

Driving Directions: from Kerrville, 5 mi. W on TX 27, between Kerrville & Ingram, on left.

GPS Coordinates: 30°04.355N & 99°12.913W

UTM Easting: 479440 / UTM Northing: 3227119